My Autobiography

My name is Tamil and I was born in 2006 at Chennai, Tamil Nadu, India. Chennai is the capital of Tamil Nadu. It is quite a big town and the air is not so fresh because of the factory smoke. The hospital I was born in was so busy and there were lots of doctors.

In 2012 on my 7th birthday my dad got a phone call from Auckland, New Zealand saying he had a job at a restaurant called Saffron. So my dad booked a ticket for the plane and 10 days after he reached Auckland. The next day he went to the restaurant and saw the owner who said to my dad that he can start work the day after tomorrow. So my dad went to the little apartment he was staying in. After a few hours he left his apartment to go sightseeing. Later he came back to his apartment and then he had an idea of my mum, sister and me coming to New Zealand. The next day he talked to my mum and asked her if it's ok if he booked a ticket for the three of us to come to NZ. Then my mum had a think and said "yes". My dad got the idea of us coming to NZ because he wanted me to learn English and be in the fresh air.

After a few days we arrived in NZ and I loved the nature around me. The air was so fresh here. Later we arrived at the apartment and had a little sleep. My life in NZ is fantastic and when I first went to Maungawhau School I was really shy to talk to the teacher. But after a few days it got better and I made lots of friends inside school and outside the school.

I love my life in NZ and hope to go to India when I am 14 years and see my grandfather and my grandmother. I am really happy being in NZ.
